Boise Valley ARMA, in partnership with Zasio Enterprises and the Idaho State Historical Society, invite you to a special event with John Mancini, renowned author, speaker, information governance expert, and former president of AIIM.

Event Registration

John will share his personal journey that shaped his view on why records and governance matter and inspired him to write his latest book – "Immigrant Secrets: The Search for my Grandparents."

"My father — a kind and quirky happily married man and father of six, now gone for 35 years — NEVER discussed his family. The only thing we knew was that his parents were Italian immigrants and died in the 1930s. Except they didn't. My book, Immigrant Secrets, is the story of the role of records and archives in discovering the truth of my grandparents' lives. How did these two unknown grandparents simply disappear? Why? How does such a thing happen?"

John Mancini

His book is the context for a broader reflection on the nature of records management and information governance in an era of breathtaking levels of technology disruption.

- What he learned along the journey about records and archives and the people entrusted with their care?
- What steps do we need to take NOW to make sure that future generations have access to the history that we are creating EVERY DAY?
- What does information stewardship look like in an era of rampant digital information chaos?
- Why does governance matter - not just to make our organizations safer and more productive — but to how our society will be remembered?
- How do we want future generations to view our profession?
